Catechism on Holy Week

The 1962 rite abolished the folded chasuble and the “broad stole” (stola longior). The custom of the broad stole is ancient, and no one had ever dared alter this custom because of its antiquity. The cropped chasuble and the bigger stole represent the extraordinary sorrow of the Church during the days of Holy Week. The reformers of the liturgy were simply following the principle that “less is more;” a principle of modern architecture. They thought that “modern man” (an undefined entity if there ever was one) did not care much for symbolism and wanted things plain, unadorned, and simple. Of course the laity were not consulted on this – there was no demand for these changes from them. Nor was there a demand from parish priests or bishops, but from liturgical experts.

In the 1952 Missal, the palm branches are blessed on the altar – the “horn” of the Epistle side if you will – after a reading, a gradual, a Gospel, and above all a Preface with a “Sanctus” that introduces the prayers of blessing. This is the ancient rite of the so-called missa sicca (dry Mass). This rite parallels the Mass, with an Introit, a Collect (no Kyrie), and Epistle, a Gradual and a Gospel. After the Gospel, there is another prayer which corresponds to the Secret of the Mass. The conclusion of this prayer leads into the Preface Dialogue, and a Preface at the end of which is sung the Sanctus. Then follows a kind of “canon” in which the palms or branches are blessed with five prayers. The branches are sprinkled with holy water then incensed, and the priest sings a sixth prayer which corresponds to the communion antiphon. Then the branches are distributed to the attending clergy and faithful, and the choir sings the Pueri Hebraeorum. Then the priest sings another prayer, which corresponds, both in position and thought, to the Postcommunion of the Mass, after which the procession begins.

The Carmelite Monastery is located at 6138 S. Gallup St. in Littleton, about 1 mile from OLMC.

From the Pastor:

- Since there was no adoration this past Thursday, the intention of this Thursday’s holy hour is the same as the last bulletin: For all Catholics who are confused in any way regarding their faith; that they may be strengthened by the Sacred Heart.

- Our district superior has ordered that sermons not be recorded and posted on the internet. These are being used without the permission of our priests, and sometimes not in so good a way. So sermons will not be recorded and put on the parish website any longer, and the ones that were posted have been removed. I may post the sermons in written form however...but I need to think about this more.

- I’m going to take off a few days this week, leaving this afternoon and returning Wednesday evening.

- Bishop Eugene J. Gerber died recently. He was the bishop who ordained me, and he wanted me to go to Rome for further studies. He had great aspirations for me, but my decision to join the FSSP was a bitter pill for him to swallow. I know he was deeply disappointed in me, but I only wanted to serve in some parish and in the full Tradition of the Church. I wrote him a letter last year, hoping that he had forgiven me, and I received a beautiful letter in reply that all was forgiven and that he was happy for me. I’m so glad there was nothing between us except mutual respect and appreciation when he died. May he rest in peace! If I have done some good things in the 33 past years of priesthood, it is especially due to him. Please say a prayer for the repose of his soul.

- FSSP liturgical calendars for 2019 are for sale in the parish hall after the Masses. Every home should have a liturgical calendar – every parishioner should know what feast day it is for every day.

- A monk of Silverstream Priory in Ireland is translating the letters of direction written by the Rev. Mother Abbess Mechtilde of the Blessed Sacrament, O.S.B., a 17c Benedictine abbess. I read the following at adult education, thinking it appropriate to the subject I was on:

What troubles you oftentimes, is the desire you have to be perfect. You would wish not to fall, because it seems to you that so many miseries are holding you back. Have patience until Our Lord has purified you and, while waiting, stay humble under the weight of your imperfections. One must even be resigned to remaining imperfect one’s whole life. You are making the highest perfection consist in the practice of a few virtues. These are all good and necessary, but the achievement of true perfection consists in the total loss of our will in the divine will, in such wise that a soul is more or less imperfect to the degree that she is more or less in submission to God’s good pleasure and united to it. A soul who wants what God wants is happy. All our discontent comes from self-will and from the secret attachments that we have to our own inclinations.
