Catechism on Holy Week

When we consider the reformed Holy Week of the Ven. Pius XII, the dates are useful. The Ordo Hebdomadae Sanctae (Order of Holy Week) of 1955-1956 begins the huge changes in the liturgy, the “battering ram” as Fr. Braga said, against the traditional liturgy. I’ll just abbreviate it as OHS 1956.

One of the first changes had to do with the color of the vestments. In the Missale Romanum 1952 (MR 1952 from here on), violet is used for both the procession and the Mass following. But in the archives of the Commission for the changes, the justification to change the color came from a professor of pastoral theology from a Swiss seminary. He said, “One thing that perhaps might be done...the color red might be restored as was used in the Middle Ages for this solemn procession. The color red recalls the royal purple. In this way the procession is distinguished as something sui generis.”

Several things should be noted about this. First, perhaps red does recall the royal purple, but it is very difficult to see how. In the traditional Roman Rite, red always signified either the blood of martyrdom or the fire of the Holy Ghost, though in the Ambrosian Rite it symbolizes the blood of the Passion.

Second, the assertion that this was the practice in the middle ages turns out to be unproven. There is no evidence for this.

Third, the search for things that are sui generis in the liturgy and then inserting them willy-nilly into the liturgy is a questionable practice.

The use of violet for both the procession and the Mass shows I think, a better connection between the two events of the triumphal procession into Jerusalem, and the fact that He was entering the city in order to suffer, die and be buried. The use of violet therefore, is the better symbolism.

The Carmelite Monastery is located at 6138 S. Gallup St. in Littleton, about 1 mile from OLMC.

From the Pastor:

- The intention for this week’s Holy Hour is in reparation for the unnatural sins of the hierarchy and clergy.

- Much reparation must be done. The two intentions I made for the backpacking expedition from which I just returned were for the virtue of purity for my parishioners, and in reparation for the sins of the hierarchy and clergy. The Archbishop has asked that we celebrate one Mass per month for the same intention.

- The backpacking expedition with the Wyoming Catholic College freshmen, was about the best vacation I’ve had in a very long time. It will take much time to process it all, but in the meantime, I thought I would give you a few of the details.

- We hiked about 71 miles through the Shoshone National Forest, the Grand Teton National Park, then through the Grand Teton Wilderness Area. Elevation gain was about 32,000 feet of climbing, and my pack was 44 pounds with water bottles. One quarter of the hiking was bushwhacking; hard, hot, sweaty work. I loved it. My pack was way too heavy, especially trying to keep up with 19 year old college lads. Wyoming is the least populated state in the U.S., and that wilderness area is the least populated in the state. We went for a long time before seeing anyone, and met a solo hiker on a little trail. “Where are you headed?” one of our party asked. “Canada!” was his reply. And this very nice gentleman wished us, “Godspeed!”

- Near the end of the expedition I found the climbing much easier. The reason was because I lost 10 pounds with all the exertion, so not having that extra weight was really nice!

- The outdoor program at Wyoming Catholic College is the best I’ve ever seen for that age group. I’m going to put my name in for next year, because I very much want to do it again.

- "Can't you worship God in your own way? There is another side to that. Will you? I've noticed that the people who protest violently that 'they would rather worship God under the spreading oak trees of His mighty forests than in any cathedral made by man' never go either to the forests or the cathedral. People who are willing to worship at all are rather glad that an expert like the Church helps them to do it a little less badly. People who protest they want to worship their own way usually don't worship at all." Fr. Daniel Lord, S.J.

- The start date for the sanctuary remodel is now September 10.
